THE WAR QUESTION IN EUROPE.

Review of the Diplomatic Relations

of the Continental States.

EUROPEAN ALLIANCES. From the Cincinnati Commercial. The defiant declaration of the French Journal Official de l'Empire, which has taken the place of the old Moniteur, that, in case the silence of Prussia as to the Hohenzollern question should be pro-longed for twenty-four hours, there would be a movement of French troops upon the ing out of war between the two great military glants of the European Continent has become inevitable. If it did it would a pisso descend from that proud position which it has, ever since the close of the wonderful campaign of 1866, occu-pied in the international councils of Eu-on the ability of the officers to whom their pied in the international councils of Europe, and without which it will be unable to complete the great work of German unification, which is the most prominent object of its German and foreign policy.

That declaration in the official organ of the imperial Government of France clearly demonstrates two things. It shows, in the first place, that the Emperor Napolear is the first place, that the Emperor Napohe first place, that the Emperor Napoleon is firmly determined to wage war in his foreign policy toward France, yet against Prussia unless the latter power should submit to humiliating terms, such as the revocation of its uniltury conventions with the South-German States, the demolition of the fortifications of Mayence, a strict execution of the stipulation of the Tulleries to rush blindly in to the arms of the latter and join it in a war

The appointment of the Duke de Grammont to the position of Minister of Foreign African Service of Se Government, would abundon its policy of lessent it should draw the sword for France, hesitation, and temporization toward Prussia, and pursue a less friendly course to ward the latter Power, in regard to the great question of German unification. The interview which the Czur Alexander the Second of Russia and King William great question of German unification. The intrigue by which Count von Bismarck and Don Juan Prim de Reus rendered the election of Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern an accomplished fact, was no doubt most galling to the pride of the Eugene Superior of the two sovereigns in question have been joined Trust or of legitimate criticism. The way the bird flutters in both its ed-Government, would abandon its policy of case it should draw the sword for France, Emperor Napoleon and his ministers, who had all along deemed the candidature of the Duke de Montpensier the one most to the deeded by the Cabinet of the Tuillers, and who, but a few days since, after Queen Isabella the Second had formally Queen Isabella the Sacond had formally around the eagles of Russia. And then abdicated in lavor of her son, the Prince of Asturia, really believed that it would in allow a latter's head, will find the Magyars the Spanish Crown on the latter's head, will fight for it any more enthusiastic while the wily Prussian statesman and the foxy Prin were secretly and successibly the support of the paragraph about "a featuring the wires for the success lower that, in spite of the assertion belonged to the Convention" which they now copy as from the Point Pleasant Register. or Leopold von Hohenzollern. But, after veyed to us by semi-official dispatches all, this Hohenzollern-Prim incident, as the Continental papers will call it, is a mere prefext, so far as the French Government is concerned. It knows very well that, although Prince Leopold of Prench Government, that power will observe the policy of the Prench Government, that power will observe the policy of the property of the policy of the prince Leopold of Prench Government, that power will observe the policy of the prench Government and power will observe the policy of the prench Government that power will observe the policy of the prench Government that power will observe the policy of the pol well that, although Prince Leopoid of Hohenzollern is an officer in the army of King William I. of Prussia, and that all his connections are ardently in favor of Prussia, he is not a vassal of the King; it knows equally well, too, that, even though the Prince in question, who has suddenly become as famous as the Duke C'Enghien of the Prence, will no doubt urge him to make the prince in question, who has suddenly become as famous as the Duke C'Enghien was in his time, should incontinently ascent the Spanish throne, he would, under the circumstances prevailing through. der the circumstances prevailing through-out the whole Iberian Peninsula at this Italy is so hostile to France that the Royal out the whole therian Peninsula at this juncture, have little power to cause seriour trouble to the French Government. For the State Treasury at Madrid is well as the could not for a mount expect to cope with the luminense bodies of troops which the Emperor of the French, if he had to deal with Shain alone, would he able to law of King Law of France and Prussia. It has been the beautiful of the French press to involve the Kingdom of Belgium in the great quarrel between France and Prussia. It has been stated by the Parrs Constitutionele that it was the Countess of Flanders, sister-in-law of King Law of King Law

Let us now look for a moment at the position of Prusia. The French pressinvelghs in unmeasured terms against Count von Bismarck, who, they loudly and configuration as well configuration as well configuration as well configuration assert connected the research of the configuration as well configuration as well configuration. rise but for the fact that this territory i and confidently assert, concocied the whole Hohenzollern affair with Juan Prim de Reus. Bismarck's organ, the North-German Allgemeine Zeitung, as a matter of course, denies all this; but there is good reason to believe that all the Parisian press has charged in regard to this question is substantially true. Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern would never have consented to become a candidate for the Spanish throne if he had not previously obtained permission from the King of Prussia to accept the offer made, him by and confidently assert, concocted the consented to become a candidate for the Spanish throne if he had not previously obtained permission from the King of Prussia to accept the offer made him by Gen. Prim, and the latter would have hardly thought of putting the crown of Ferdinand and Isabella on the head of a Hohenzollern Prince it Count von Bismark had not suggested the propriety of the candidature, and assured the Spanish Government that it would have the most cordial sympathy on the part of the North-German Confederation, in case it should bring about the election of the Prince of Hohenzollern to the royal throne of Spain. But all this, no matter low plausible it may appear, is a mere matter of surmise. Hismarck has carried on his negotiations with Prim and Serrano so adroitly and secretly that the Cabinet of the Tuileries had no idea of what was pope of obtaining again possession of the prince of the Tuileries had no idea of what was pope of obtaining again possession of of surmise. Bismarck has carried on his negotiations with Prim and Serrano so adroitly and secretly that the Cabinet of the Tuileries had no idea of what was going on; and now that the affair is being about brought to a close; its sleepy Minister of Foreign Affairs is suddenly startled by a dispatch from its hardly less sleepy Ambassador at the Court of Berlin, to the effect that Bismarck has outwitted them all; and boiling over with rage, it prefers hope of obtaining again possession of Schleswig-Holstein, which they lost six years ago through their folly and insolence. The Danes are as hot-blooded, as proud and reckless as the French, and they will rush into the midst of the fray regardless of consequences. The Swedes and Nor-

The Prince is is not even a relative of the royal family of Prussia. General Prim regulated with the Prince and obtained his consent. So if the French Cabinet wants to hold some body responsible for what has occurred, it must turn to General Prim." This reply is no doubt most unsatisfactory to the Powers in Paris, but if shows that, while the Prussian Government will not allow itself to be intimidated by the binstering of the French press and the threats of the Imperial Ministers, it will take the utmost pains to place France in the disadvantageous position of aggressor.

WELLMAN'S

The "WELLMAN GRATE" is essentially difrent from any other Grate, and possesses merits of ar superior that comparison is useless. We claim for it the following advantages over ny other grate:
First—As a radiator of heat, it has double the intensity.

Second—It is unquestionably the most cleanly, no soot or sakes escaping into the room, which in the ordinary grate proves so detrimental to Carpets and Furniture.

Third—The combination is perfect. There is no waste in unburnt cinders; every onnce of the free is so completely consumed that nothing remains but the finest askes. Fourth—As an economizer of fuel, there being an actual saving of at least 25 per cout.

Fifth-It is highly orname Sixth-It is set so deep in the chimney that it is much safer, and less liable to puff in windy weather.

Seventh—A slight motion of the Agitator cleanes the entire fire, and causes it to burn with great brilliancy and intensity of heat.

Parties who are building, or who contemplate thanging grates, are respectfully requested to eximine the "Wellman." Every Grate is guaranteed to give perfect satis
